Miles voted against guaranteeing basic protections and medical care for children who survive an attempted abortion. By this vote, Miles favored infanticide.

Miles also voted for amendments clearly intended to weaken or undermine Pro-Life Senate Bill 22, which prohibited cities and counties from using local tax dollars to benefit the abortion industry. By voting against this priority Pro-Life bill, Miles publicly supported allowing cities and counties to continue using Texans' tax dollars to benefit the abortion industry.

Additionally, Miles voted against prohibiting the remaining late-term abortions in Texas and opposed prohibiting discriminatory abortions. By this vote, he publicly endorsed deadly discrimination in the womb and late-term abortions.

Lastly, Miles also refused to support reforming the current rule that allows basic life-sustaining treatment (like a ventilator) to be withdrawn from patients against their will after the hospital committee gives the patient a 10-day notice. When the measure came up for a vote, Miles was "Present, Not Voting," hoping to confuse voters and avoid responsibility. Texas has more to offer vulnerable patients than imposed death or involuntary euthanasia.

Senate Bill 23 by Senator Lois Kolkhorst (R-Brenham): The Born-Alive Infant Protection Act

Ensures medical intervention and legal protection for children born alive after an attempted abortion.

Senate Bill 23 passed the Senate but the House version of the bill, House Bill 16, ultimately became law.
